

THIRTEEN ARE KILLED WHEN TRAINS CRASH

Wreck on the Pennsy This Morning in Dense Fog

Plainsboro, N. J., Nov. 12—(AP)—Thirteen persons were killed early today when a St. Louis express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad bound for New York, telescoped another Pennsylvania train from Washington, also bound for New York.

Eleven bodies have been recovered from the wreckage of the two rear cars of the Washington train. Two more bodies are still in the wreckage. The bodies of the dead were sent by train to New Brunswick and Trenton. The company officials announced that 122 uninjured passengers were taken off the two trains, sent to New York. The Washington train, made up of 6 steel coaches and three Pullmans, the Bruceville, Snelaker and Moorhead, was proceeding at a rate of ten miles an hour over a straight track through a heavy fog when the St. Louis flyer, said to have been running at 50 miles an hour, plowed through it. The Moorhead was rammed through the car Snelaker and split in half. Most of the dead and injured were in these cars.

The engine of the speeding train remained on the rails. The engineer, Timothy Carroll of Jersey City, escaped serious injury and ran to the nearest telephone, two miles away and summoned aid.

RUSH RELIEF TRAINS

New York, Nov. 12—(AP)—Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad have dispatched two relief trains, ambulances, doctors and nurses to Monmouth Junction, N. J., where there was a collision between two passenger trains during a heavy fog this morning. Only two Pullman cars, on one of the trains were derailed, according to the information from the scene of the wreck, by the railroad's New York offices.

Officials of the road said they did not know whether any passengers were killed. The trains in collision were number 166 from Washington and number 6 from Pittsburgh. The latter train struck the other one from the rear during a heavy fog. The two rear Pullmans on train number 166 were derailed.

The two eastbound tracks of the road at this point were blocked to all traffic. Six trains which were on these tracks within an hour after the wreck were to be switched to one of the two tracks usually used for west bound trains.

Relief trains from Trenton and Jersey City had reached the scene about an hour after the wreck.

Four Year Old Girl Is Burned to Death

Carlo, Ill., Nov. 12—(AP)—Helen Hethmon, age 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hethmon, was burned to death in her home here Wednesday night when matches with which she was playing, ignited her clothing, enveloping her in flames.

The mother ran into the house when she heard the screams of her little daughter and attempted to beat out the flames with her bare hands, fighting frantically until she fainted. A neighbor heard the screams of the child and the mother and rushed into the house. She dragged the mother to a safe distance from the burning child and smothered the flames with a table cloth. But the little girl's body had already been burned to a crisp and she died within a short time.

Bernard Shaw Tells Why He Won't Come to Chamberlain Party

London, Nov. 12—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, invited by T. P. (Tay) O'Connor, to attend a non-party dinner on Nov. 20, in honor of Foreign Secretary Chamberlain, has made a characteristic reply. A postcard received by Mr. O'Connor read: "No, really. The dinner should be to me."

"It was I who proposed a Locarno pact in 1913 and again on New Year's Day, 1914, when it might have prevented the war. What use is it now when all the mischief is done?"

"However, I feel greatly to Mr. Chamberlain's credit that he is only twelve years behind me instead of fifty."

LOCAL WAR VETS HONOR COMRADES WHO GAVE LIVES

An impressive tribute was paid to the memory of those men who fell in the late war by members of Horace F. Orr post, No. 549, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States yesterday Armistice day. At 11 o'clock sharp, a firing squad of eight pieces with National and Post colors occupied the intersection of Galena avenue and First street and while facing the east fired three volleys, after which taps were sounded. All auto traffic ceased and pedestrians were reminded to face the east with uncovered heads.

CHINESE PLOT THICKENS, NO CLARITY TO IT

"Christian General" Takes President Prisoner

Shanghai, Nov. 12—(AP)—With an apparent censorship in effect the North China Daily News learns from private sources in Peking that the chief executive Tuan Chi Jul, is practically a prisoner in the hands of Feng Yu Hsiang, the "Christian general."

The report coincides with an Eastern News Agency message from Peking that Feng decided to disarm Tuan Chi Jul's bodyguard with the object of taking Tuan into custody on the plea of guarding him.

HEAR PRESIDENT QUIT
Honolulu, Nov. 12—(AP)—The Japanese press here reports advice from Peking which indicate martial law has been declared there and that the president has resigned.

OFFICIALS FLEE CAPITAL
Peking, Nov. 12—(AP)—Some of the members of the cabinet have resigned, and several officials, supporters of Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, have fled the capital.

MANY FALL IN BATTLE
Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 12—(AP)—A communique issued by the headquarters of Marshal Chang Tso Lin admits that the losses of the Manchurian forces in the recent fighting in the region of Hsuehchow and Kuehen were very heavy, 2,000 being killed. The communique places the losses of the enemy at two brigades.

Latest reports on the Chinese civil war situation were that heavy fighting south of Hsuehchow between Manchurian and Chongking forces was followed by the defection of some of Chang's forces, compelling his army to withdraw from Hsuehchow into Shantung Province.

SITUATION NOT CLEAR

Washington, Nov. 12—(AP)—Direct official advice from Peking failed to throw additional light on the involved situation in the Chinese capital.

Whether the movements of the three chief figures among the military leaders of China in the present triangular struggle for power has reached a point where suspension of the special customs conference in Peking is to be expected, is not known here. The government's participating in the conference have manifested a desire to proceed as long as there was a Chinese delegation representing the central government to deal with.

The renewal of civil war in China with Wu Pei Fu, the southern chief, aiming at driving Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, back to the north and wrestling Peking and the central government from his control, apparently is directly connected with the customs conference.

The doubtful factor in the situation is the attitude of general Feng Yu Hsiang, the Christian general who holds the balance of power as between Wu and Chang.

The attitude of the Washington government may be expected to continue as one of strict neutrality, coupled with a desire to proceed with both the customs conference and the extra territorial conference which is to follow.

Washington, Nov. 12—(AP)—An agreement was reached today for funding the Italian war debt.

Announcement of the settlement followed a conference by members of the American debt commission and President Coolidge and a later meeting between the Italian mission and the Americans. The details were not immediately disclosed.

GEORGE REED, WELL KNOWN DIXONITE, IS CALLED IN DEATH

Popular Pioneer Citizen Dies After Illness of About Two Weeks

George Foxcroft Reed, one of the best known veterans and pioneer business men of Dixon, passed peacefully to rest Wednesday morning at 9:45 at the home of his son, Lee Reed, 211 East Boyd street. Death ended an illness of about two weeks, during which time he gradually grew weaker until the end.

George Foxcroft Reed was born in Lewiston, Maine, July 4, 1845, the son of Joseph Foxcroft Reed and Mary Brown Sturges. At the age of 16 he enlisted in the Seventeenth regiment, Maine Volunteers. He was wounded in the Battle of the Wilderness, taken prisoner and thrown into Libby prison, from which he was transferred to Andersonville and later to Florence prison, being confined seven months in all. He was exchanged and furnished home in December, 1864. While on this furlough he met Ellen M. Bryant whom he married in February, 1866.

Mr. Reed came to Dixon in 1857 as a foreman for the C. M. Henderson Shoe Company with whom he had been employed in the east. He lived here until 1909 when he moved with his daughter to Urbana, Ill. Since then he has spent part of his time in Urbana and part with his son Lee Reed in Dixon.

He was a member of Post 299 of the Grand Army of the Republic of the Dixon lodge, No. 779, B. P. O. Elks and Friendship lodge, No. 7, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Reed had been a Mason for 50 years, having joined the lodge in Fairfield, Maine, immediately after his twenty-first birthday.

Of his immediate family there remains a son, Lee Reed of Dixon, a daughter, Alice Roberts of Urbana and two granddaughters, Olive Reed and Nellie Roberts Kennedy. His wife and daughter Belle had preceded him in death.

Mr. Reed rode up from Urbana with his son's family two weeks ago and was apparently in good health. He was taken ill almost immediately after he arrived and failed rapidly. The end came Wednesday morning. The funeral will be held from the home of his son, 211 East Boyd street on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Prentiss Hovey Case, pastor of the Presbyterian church will officiate and burial will take place in Oakwood.

PRISON FOR TWO OF GENNA GANGSTERS; KILLED POLICEMAN

Crowe Plans New Trial on New Charge in Effort to Hang Them

Chicago, Nov. 12—(AP)—John Scallisi and Albert Anselmi, members of the notorious Genna gang, who killed a policeman, were found guilty of murder and their sentence was fixed at 14 years imprisonment by a jury which deliberated ten hours until early today.

Their victim, Harold Olson, was shot in a pistol battle in which another policeman, Charles Walsh and Mike Genna, gang leader, were killed.

Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, who had sought the death penalty, announced that Scallisi and Anselmi would be tried at once on another murder charge in connection with Walsh's death and a verdict of hanging would again be sought. The defense asked for a new trial.

The jurors who took the case early last evening spent the night arguing between a manslaughter and murder verdict, though instructed to avoid entirely a manslaughter charge. A majority favored a verdict of guilty of murder throughout, it was reported.

Claimed Self Defense

Self defense was the theory of the defense's closing arguments which with the state's plea for death, occupied four days. Scallisi and Anselmi contended that they did not know that the automobile which drew up alongside theirs contained policemen and so shot in self defense.

Freeport Youths in Extortionist Plot

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 12—(AP)—With the confession of R. D. Schroeder, 17, to the police today that he was part of the blackmailing schemes of Harry Commons, 20, and Henry Raeppe, 19, in which one Freeport man paid $1,000 and others were threatened for sums up to $5,000, it was believed by the police that an end has been brought to the activities of the youthful extortionist gang. Besides Raeppe and Commons, who have already confessed, Schroeder's confession is said to implicate two women as other accomplices.

TO ROCKFORD MEETING

Henry Hellenor and Harold Woodley of the Chamber of Commerce went to Rockford this morning to attend a meeting of the Black Hawk Trial association. Definite plans for the formal opening of the new cement paving from Dixon to Rockford are expected to be made at this meeting and the definite date for holding the celebration decided upon. Thus far, Nov. 19 is the date that has tentatively been decided upon.

AMBOY GIRL IS SHOT—MAY LOSE SIGHT OF EYE

(Telegraph Special Service)

Amboy, Nov. 12—Ruth, the seven year old daughter of Irving Haws of Amboy, was painfully injured in an accident Sunday at her home. She was with her father hunting a rabbit in the yard at their home. The rabbit ran underneath a woodshed and the child went into the building and was looking in a hole in the floor when the shot gun in the hands of her father who was on the outside exploded. Four of the shot hit the child in the face, one pelvis penetrating the eye ball, another embedding itself beneath the skin on her forehead but not penetrating the skull. She was given immediate medical attention, but it is feared that the injured eye may have to be removed.

COMINSKY JURY IN DISAGREEMENT; HE GOES BACK TO JAIL

A New Trial in January is Prospect for Fulton Man

Morrison, Ill., Nov. 11—John Cominsky, unmarried farmer from the Cottonwood district near Fulton must stand trial for the second time on the charge that he murdered his former sweetheart, Mrs. Marie L. McKee, a comely widow of Fulton.

The jury that heard the evidence in Cominsky's first trial was dismissed by Judge W. T. Churchill yesterday. The jury was no chance for agreement. The jury had deliberated 24 hours, the last vote being four for conviction and eight for acquittal.

Mrs. McKee was choked to death last September in her room in the Fulton telephone exchange, where she was employed as night operator. Cominsky, who was said to have been jilted by the young woman and expressed a desire to "get her" was arrested and held to trial.

The states case rested chiefly on circumstantial evidence, strongest of which was identifications of finger prints in the girl's room which tallied with those of Cominsky. The jury's second trial will be held at the January term of court.

Morrison, Ill., November 11—Judge Churchill let the Cominsky jury go, and called it a mistrial, at 4:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The jury had been impatient during the afternoon, after more than a week of work in the murder case, and nearly 24 hours of confinement to the jury room.

About the middle of the morning the jury expressed a desire to get away, but the judge sent the panel back to deliberate again.

Early in the afternoon the judge received another indication from the jury that it couldn't agree, but Judge Churchill recommended further deliberation.

Only a few persons remained in the audience chamber of the court room, when at 4 o'clock a deputy sheriff brought Cominsky from the jail to the court room. These included his two sisters, who had been faithful attendants at the trial, and who remained at the court house most of the time the jury was out.

Jury Comes In

Just at 4:15 o'clock, 24 hours almost to a minute since its retirement, the jury filed into the court room and members of the panel took their accustomed seats. They carried the screen door, clothing and other exhibits which had been turned over to them when they retired. Neither State's Attorney Robert W. Besse or Defense Attorney J. J. Ludens was present.

The judge addressed W. H. LaMonte of Prophetstown, foreman of the jury.

"Is there any possibility of an agreement?" the judge asked Mr. LaMonte.

"There is not," was the foreman's answer. Answering further questions of the judge Mr. LaMonte said the results of late ballots were practically the same as those of the earlier voting. "I do not ask you what these results were," said the judge, "That is nobody's business but your own. Then there has been practically no change?"

"No sir," said LaMonte.

"Is it the consensus of opinion of the entire jury that an agreement cannot be reached?" the judge continued.

All of the jurors responded in the affirmative.

After questioning the jury foreman as to whether all exhibits had been returned in the same condition in which they had been received, and receiving assurance that they had, the judge expressed disappointment that a verdict could not be reached, and discharged the jury. He then ordered that the exhibits be turned over to Sheriff Hamilton who was present.

Case Up in January?

Court officials yesterday afternoon said the case probably will be tried again at the January term of court, when Judge C. J. Seale of Rock Island will be on the bench in Whiteside county.

Cominsky's expression did not change when the jury came in with its disagreement. It was said, however, the failure of the jury to reach a verdict was a great disappointment to him, and that he seemed very downcast when he was taken back to the jail.

RAIDED LOONEY HOME TO SECURE EVIDENCE, CLAIM

Looney's Lawyer Asks Court to Suppress "Illegal" Evidence

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 12—(AP)—Attorney R. D. Robinson of Galesburg, representing John Looney, of Rock Island, who is charged with the murder of William Gabel, came into this morning and formally petitioned Judge William Williams asking that the court suppress evidence in connection with the trial scheduled to commence here November 23, property alleged to have been taken illegally from the Looney home in Rock Island by agents of former Attorney General Brundage, John Kinney, a detective of the Rock Island police department, Dennis Bennett, another Rock Island detective, and Gus Kruger, Orville Bragg and David E. Smith, three police officers of Rock Island. The petition alleges that the first raid was made November 19, 1922 and that two other raids were made in following days by the same persons, none of whom had search warrants, as is required by law.

Hunting knives, a revolver, letters received by Looney for a period of four years, legal documents and pictures were named in the property alleged to have been taken.

Judge Graham announced that a hearing on the petition will be held next Monday.

SEEK CUSTODIAN CASE OF HOOTCH WOULD IMPOUND IT

Mrs. Catalina Found Guilty of Flouting Mr. Volstead's Law

Wanted—A custodian for two dozen pints of "moon" booze. Apply to Judge William L. Leech in the county court.

Attorney J. A. Brooks presented a verified motion to impound evidence, one case containing two dozen pint bottles of "hootch" taken from the Essex coach of Mrs. Elizabeth Craig of Amboy township on the evening of Feb. 13, Mrs. Craig on the stand told Judge Leech that she did not want the package back again and her 15 year old son who was driving the car at the time deputies stopped them on the Chicago road, about five miles south of Dixon, also declined acceptance of the package of mystery.

In the testimony of the two witnesses, Mrs. Craig stated that she went to the home of Mrs. John DuBois on the evening of Feb. 13 and on the way home, was stopped by two deputies, her car searched and a package taken from the rear seat. How the package came to be in the car she did not know. Questioned as to other reason for her visit at the DuBois farm, Mrs. Craig told State's Attorney Keller that she at first believed that her husband had asked her to go but that she was misinformed.

The son, who was driving the car, also denied any knowledge of the mysterious package, which upon examination was found to contain liquor in bottles bearing labels of a former popular brand of whisky. The argument to impound was based on the grounds that the deputies were not authorized to search a warrant at the time of Mrs. Craig and son. The case was still set for argument this afternoon.

EASY TO PICK BIG SPORT HEROES FOR THE WORLD IN 1925

Grange, Nurmi, Tilden, Lenglen and Bobby Jones Among the Big Ones

New York, Nov. 12—(AP)—Seldom in the course of the hectic campaigns in modern sports is it easy to pick out and label the outstanding heroes as in 1925.

Red Grange, for instance, stands alone on the gridiron pedestal. It is a source of regret that the death of Walter Camp prevents Grange from joining the select circle of stars who have gained a place on the late Yale critic's All-American selections three years in a row.

Babe Ruth stands out among track and field athletes, while Big Bill Tilden and Miss Suzanne Lenglen dominate the tennis world and Rogers Hornsby looms large in the major league baseball field.

In golf Joyce Wethered, the British star, likewise tops the women's golf list. Few will question the top ranking position of Bobby Jones.

The list of backfield aces led by Grange presents an unusually difficult problem this fall in making All-American or even all-sectional selections. Probably the midwest would agree generally upon Grange, Kutch and Friedman for three of its all star backfield, but Molenda of Michigan, Mark of Ohio State, McCarthy of Chicago and Baker of Northwestern would demand consideration in picking the fourth attacking back.

Tryon of Colgate, Oberlander of Dartmouth and Greuz of Pennsylvania would be hard to keep off any all eastern backfield array, with Bunnell of Yale, or Pease of Columbia among the outstanding candidates as quarterbacks.

Caddie Breaks All Records at Golf

Chicago, Nov. 12—(AP)—If reports are true, Laddie Wladzinski, 18-year-old caddie of Robinson, Ill., was the golf sharpshooter of the universe Armistice Day.

He was credited with two holes in one and with breaking the Lincoln Park municipal course record.

His tee shot at the 327 yard second hole and the 167 yard seventh were perfect. His card was 32 against the former record of 35.

Douglas Erel, Shreveport, La., and another partner of Laddie in a three-hole confirmed the reports.

REV. CARLSON IN FINE TALK BEFORE KIWANIS TUESDAY

Local Pastor's Armistice Day Talk Arouses Great Enthusiasm

Rev. Albert W. Carlson, the new pastor of the Methodist church in Dixon, delivered a splendid address Tuesday noon before the Kiwanis Club of Dixon on the occasion of the entertainment of the Dixon Post of the American Legion by the Kiwanians. Rev. Carlson's address is reproduced here in full:

"HUMANITY AND GOD"

In Memoriam. We have come to pay tribute to the loyalty of our soldier heroes in memory of their service for our country and for the welfare of the whole world. We have not forgotten our will or can we soon forget the days when the call came for soldiers.

When Uncle Sam, after a term of watchful waiting found he could not with justice stand on the side lines any longer. He had been a mute observer for three and one half years. Very strenuous effort had been made to stop the great malestrom of violence, and if possible become the peace arbitrator of the world. Most every big hearted and honest American longed for the privilege of having the United States being the Mediator for God in behalf of the human race, and to hold such a peace pact at the Capitol city.

When such an effort failed and we found that the enemy was using the very ammunition which she had bought from our shores, was being used to destroy our own civilians, we found that our entrance into the great strife was inevitable. And so, taking time to deliberate and with the most careful wording of the declaration which entered America into the world war, President Wilson and the law making body of this country declared a "state of war with Germany and her Allies."

Heroism: We never can forget the muffled beating of the drums, and the call to arms which sounded to every remote corner of this great land. How our people, women and all rose as a great giant from his slumber to stand as protector of the innocent victims of brutal, promiscuous slaughter. Did Central Europe think we had no sense of honour, did she think we would slumber on and let the cruel monster

DR. BLAZER CLEARED OF GUILT AFTER JURY DISAGREES

Deadlocked Jury Discharged and Then the Case is Dismissed

Littleton, Colo., Nov. 12—(AP)—Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer today was cleared of all charges in connection with the death of his 34-year-old imbecile and crippled daughter Hazel, on Feb. 24, last.

The action came less than an hour after the jury trying him on the charge of murdering the "child woman," announced it had not reached a verdict and was discharged by Judge Samuel Johnson.

Summoned hastily from his home, Prosecutor Stone appeared before the presiding judge and made a motion for dismissal of all charges and the release of Dr. Blazer, who was taken into custody immediately after jury was discharged.

After the jury trying him on the charge of murdering the "child woman," announced it had not reached a verdict and was discharged by Judge Samuel Johnson.

Summoned hastily from his home, Prosecutor Stone appeared before the presiding judge and made a motion for dismissal of all charges and the release of Dr. Blazer, who was taken into custody immediately after jury was discharged.

BULLETIN

Littleton, Colo., Nov. 12—(AP)—Hopefully deadlocked, the jury selected to try Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer on a charge of murdering his daughter, Hazel, the 34 year old "child woman," was discharged by Judge Johnson at noon today.

Twelve men today still had in their hands, the fate of Doctor Harold E. Blazer, charged with murdering his 34 year old daughter, Hazel, a cripple and imbecile almost from birth.

The jury failed to reach a verdict late last night, after two hours of deliberation and was ordered locked up for the night by Judge Samuel Johnson who said he would be in court at 10 o'clock today to receive their decision, if reached by that time.

No alternative finding was left to the jury by the judge who instructed them that only two verdicts—guilty of first degree murder or acquittal—were possible.

"I'm not worried," Doctor Blazer declared. "The worst thing that can happen to me is a hung jury."

Final arguments were disposed of speedily yesterday afternoon and evening, and the jury was given the case at 9:45 p. m.

The closing of pleas were preceded by Judge Johnson's instructions to the jury—an order of procedure peculiar to Colorado criminal code and by his action in overruling a defense motion for a directed verdict.

"Hazel Blazer was not a reasonable human being as comprehended by the statutes of Colorado," Lewis Mowry of defense counsel said in making his motion.

Just consider all the people in the old newspaper game. From the roof down to the basement, every man has just one aim. He is there to do his portion. And he has his part to play. That the readers get each day.

To the everyday reporter

We must give the just-earned dues. 'Cause we couldn't print the paper if he didn't get the news. With the men who handle copy, And the linotyping crew, There's a rustle and a hustle As they shoot the pages through.

In the advertising corner, Things are always on the go. For they've got to get the ads that bring The much needed dough. Then the husky steno typers Take the pages as they come. And they mold them into plate form Ere the presses start to hum.

Then we reach the circulators, Over-anxious on the job To shoot their band of newbies forth A rushing, howling mob. When you're handing out the credit— Well, it's kinda hard to pick. After all, co-operation Is the thing that turns the trick.

MEETING OF DIXON WOMAN'S CLUB

The regular meeting of the Dixon Woman's Club will be held at the Christian church on Saturday afternoon at 2:30. A short business meeting will be held before the program. The club is very fortunate in securing Mrs. Frederick A. Dow of Hinsdale, Ill., to give the address for the afternoon. Mrs. Dow is no stranger to our club as she has appeared on our program before and has always pleased her audience. We are sure that all who heard her book review of "Sins Mariner" will want to hear her again on the subject of "Democracy of Early American Literature."

Mrs. Dow has been very active in the State Federation of Women's Clubs, having served as their president in 1912-1914. Our members are urged to be present and anyone else caring to hear Mrs. Dow is invited to attend upon the payment of the usual guest fee.

The hostesses for the afternoon will be Mesdames Lewis, Smith, Shaver, Rickard, Raymond and Stauffer.

Practical Club in Pleasant Meeting

The members of the Practical club held a very pleasant meeting Tuesday afternoon with fourteen members present and two visitors, Mrs. M. Hunt, mother of Hal Hunt, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Miss Margaret Caughey.

The business of the club was transacted and Mrs. G. D. Palmer then gave a most interesting paper, "Personal Record of a Woman's Life Among the Lepers." The paper dealt with the life of Mrs. Dorothy Paul Wade, wife of Dr. Wade, both devoting their life to work in the leper colony, on the island of Cullen, one of the Philippine islands. Their lives are lives of sacrifice and service and Mrs. Wade feels that while hers is a more uneventful life than that of her talented husband, still it is of much good to these people, who need certain diets and habits to cure or halt this dread disease. Dr. and Mrs. Wade are surely brave people, for they are practically isolated from their own kind.

Two piano solos were greatly enjoyed after the reading of the paper. One by Miss Miriam Slothower was Greig's Sonata in E Minor, which was brilliantly given and one by Miss Helen Marth, a "Waltz" was played with sweet expression, both girls receiving much applause.

Very nice refreshments were served during the happy social hour.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Orange juice, cereal, thin cream, crisp whole wheat toast, rich waffles, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Luncheon rice, brown bread, prune whip with custard sauce, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Cream of celery soup, breaded veal cutlets, potatoes au gratin, parsnip fritters, cabbage and pineapple salad, fig pudding, bran rolls, milk, coffee. Children under school age may be given the soup, rolls and milk from the dinner menu. A soft cooked egg or lamb patty with dessert left from luncheon might complete the meal.

Parsnip Fritters.

Four or five parsnips, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, cracker crumbs, 1 egg.

Wash and pare parsnips. Cook in boiling water until tender. Drain and mash. Season with salt, pepper, sugar and butter and beat well. Make into small flat cakes. Roll in cracker crumbs, dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water. Roll again in crumbs and fry in a frying pan until a golden brown. Brown one side, turn and brown the other. Bacon fat and butter are used for the frying fat.

MINCE MEAT.

If you decide to make your own mince meat this year keep in mind that it makes an unusual and delightful Christmas gift and make enough to take care of some appreciative friend.

A plain glass pint can attractively tied with Christmas ribbons may be a perfectly good container but if a jolly little crockery jar of some sort can be found by tripping through the shops this lucky friend will be twice blessed. Because after she bakes her pie she can use her "bit of pottery" for a darling lamp base she so inclined.

From lamps to mince meat may be quite a step but since it's all in a day's work it must be done.

Mince meat is better if made at least two weeks before wanted for use. The spices have a chance to penetrate through the meat and fruit and the whole mixture is smoother and richer.

There are non-alcoholic sherrys and brandys on the market that can be used as preferred. When either sherry or brandy is used it is added after cooking the mince meat, just before sealing.

Mince Meat—1.

Two pounds beef heart, 1/4 cup chopped suet, 3 cups chopped apples, 1 pound raisins, 1 cup shredded citron, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon all spice, 1 cup boiled cider, 2 tea-spoons salt, 2 cups brown sugar, 1/2 cup water.

Boil meat until tender. Skim during boiling. Let cool in the stock. Remove and discard fat and gristle and chop meat. Put suet through the food chopper. Sear and chop raisins. Put all ingredients into preserving kettle and bring to the boiling point. Cook, stirring to prevent burning for one hour. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

This is the cheapest recipe for mince meat. Beef heart is cheap, vinegar is used in place of orange and lemon juice and no nuts are among the ingredients.

The following recipe may be preferable to use to fill the pottery jar.

Mince Meat—2.

Beef tongue, 4 pounds pared and chopped apples, 2 pounds seeded raisins, 2 pounds currants, 1 pound shaved citron, 1 pound suet, 2 pounds sugar, 1/2 pound candied orange peel, 1 cup orange juice, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind, 4 cups boiled cider, 1 cup raspberry jam, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 nutmeg grated, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon cloves.

Boil tongue until tender. Cool, trim and chop. Chop raisins, shred candied orange peel and chop suet. Put all ingredients into preserving kettle and bring to the boiling point. Cook for one and one-half hours. Seal in sterilized jars.

If desired pour one quart of non-alcoholic sherry over mixture before sealing.

INFLUENZA
As a preventive, melt and inhale night and morning—
VICKS VAPORUB
Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly

This rule makes about five quarts of mince meat.

Any part of beef can be used. Heart is usually the cheapest and tongue the best.

Preserved cherries are delicious in mince meat.

The juice from canned fruit used with one-fourth as much molasses can take the place of boiled cider.

The rich syrup of sweet pickles can be substituted for boiled cider.

Quinces can be used with apples in the proportion of 1 quince to two pounds of apples.

Blanched and shredded almonds are often added. The nuts must be very finely chopped and are used when the mince is not so heavy with meat. From one to two pounds of almonds weighed after blanching are used for ten pounds of fruit.

Boiled cider gives mince meat a taste impossible to attain from any other source. It's the touch our great-grandmothers added in their wisdom gained from much experience and grim necessity.

THE CHURCH AND PROHIBITION.

The churches have not given up support of the prohibition law, nor continued activity for its enforcement. The report of the research department of the federal council, which created such a furore a few weeks ago, and which was quite generally denounced as having been such a document as the Association Opposed to Prohibition would gladly have paid for, is now followed by a sane statement by the administrative committee of the federal council. This statement says that "Prohibition has already yielded results which fully justify its adoption." Covering the statement of the research department, the statement says, "It is our hope and confidence that the report of the research department . . . will stir the churches to a renewed sense of their responsibility not only for the enforcement of the prohibition law but for rallying the conscience of the nation to its support.

This statement of the administrative committee should really have been submitted at the same time as the report of the research department, as it would most clearly have nullified the bad effects on dry enthusiasm that the research report created when submitted alone. Indeed there were people who believed that the report was intended to have such ill effects.

But this statement of the administrative committee now sets the united Christian churches of this country right on the question of prohibition. "There is nothing in the report (of the research department) to justify modification of the stand of the churches for prohibition," the committee says.

The report of the research department may have been just a drastic attempt to spur the churches to greater enthusiasm for prohibition enforcement, but it was worded most unfortunately. It could not well have been put in a way that would have given the liquor interests more aid and comfort.

GRACE AND RHYTHM.

Henry Ford who started a back-to-the-dances-of-our-fathers movement, may go and sit in a corner. Another captain of industry has gone back a great deal farther than he. A movement started by George Eastman, the famous kodak manufacturer, sniffs at such modernities as the waltz and two step and schottische and square dances of the last generation, and harks clear back to the ancient Greeks.

The Eastman School of the Dance and Dramatic Action is an ambitious venture, and a serious educational one, established as a part of the University of Rochester. It seeks to embody the old Greek conception of life as ruled by rhythm and grace, and regards as no less important than mathematics, science and philosophy. It will try to combine again the dance and the drama in the same serious way that the old Greeks did. Music will naturally be a prominent part of the system.

The Greeks really grouped their system of education around "music," including in that term dancing, athletics, poetry, history and other branches of learning that moderns would not think of as musical. Music meant for them the things represented by the Muses.

If more of the old grace and beauty for which Greece was famous can be brought back to this smoky, clattering, nervous world, that is excellent. It does seem a bit odd, though, that the man placed in charge of this classic revival is a Russian formerly connected with the Moscow art theater. The Russians are great artists in their way; but Russian art, with all its merits, is seldom associated with the grace and repose which characterized Greek art even in its most active forms.

OPPRESSIVE TAXES.

Automobile manufacturers earnestly ask congress, while it is cutting taxes, to take the war tax off automobiles. They generously offer to let the buyers have all the benefit. They could afford to do that, because they would sell more cars. The buyers would appreciate it, because they would save $100,000,000 or more a year. It would make the average car about $30 cheaper.

The tobacco men are similarly generous regarding their products. They say that if tobacco taxes were restored to the pre-war level they would give the public "a good five-cent cigar, which eminent authority has designated as America's chief need.

As to the automobile, no other form of property is so heavily taxed. What with his personal property tax, license fee to the state, wheel tax fee to the city, and gasoline tax, it looks as if the motorist contributes quite enough for public purposes without the war tax. With the numerous applications to congress for abolition of or cuts in taxes, wonder what individual or industry will be first to send in notice of satisfaction.

Another of life's strange compensations. After those American aviators had been sickened by trying to eat "canned Willie," they drifted to safety in Niwiliili Bay.

Still, China serves a useful purpose in the international system. As long as the powers can knock her around, they don't get into more serious devilry among themselves.

With short skirts and rolled hose, and winter only a few weeks away, it is about time for some enterprising individual to start a knee-muff business.

It is easier to run down one's neighbors, since one may now do it with an auto as well as with his tongue.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton
THE END OF THE GUESSING GAME

"My goodness, I don't know," said Little Tommy Green to Nancy.

"Who guessed the last question?" Nancy, when the guessing game was asked Mister Corn Dodger.
"I did," said Jack Horner. "It's my turn now to ask a question in the guessing game."
"So it is! So it is!" said Mister Dodger hastily. "Please, go ahead, sir."

So Jack Horner said, "Who is it that becomes more important as he gets lower down in the world? He is an empty head but he is everybody's friend."

"My goodness, I don't know, do you?" said Little Tommy Green to Nancy.

"You should know," said Jack Horner.

"Will you please tell some more about it?" said Mister Corn Dodger.

"It is too hard by far, friend Jack."

"Well," went on Jack with a twinkle in his eye. "Well—I'll do the very best I can. Let's see! It stays out of doors and sometimes it has a spout and sometimes a handle. Sometimes there is only a bucket on a rope to dip down."

"Oh, I know," shouted Nick. "It's a well."

"Of course it is," said Jack Horner. "I told you two or three times."

"So he did," laughed Nancy. "But we were too stupid to understand."

"It's your turn again, Nick," said Mister Dodger. "Can you think of anything?"

"Sure!" said Nick. "What has long ears and no tail?"

"Is that all?" asked Jack O'Leary.

"That's all," said Nick.

"Humph!" said the Scare Crow. "Anybody could guess that. It's a rabbit."

"No, sir," said Nick. "It isn't."

"A donkey?" the Clown guessed next.

"No indeed," said Nick. "A donkey has a tail."

"Well couldn't he have it cut off or something?" said the Clown.

"No, he might need his tail to switch flies off," laughed Nick. "This is no donkey, Mister Clown."

"Is it a guinea-pig?" asked Mrs. Gipsy.

"Oh, ho!" cried Nick. "Who ever heard of a guinea pig with long ears. They have scarcely any ears at all."

"I was just asking," said Mrs. Gipsy sharply. "You needn't be impudent."

Well—all the High Jinks Landers thought and thought and finally Mister Corn Dodger said:

"I think I know what it is, because I am the fairy of the cornfield. It is corn, isn't it, Nick?"

"Yes, it is," declared Nick. "Corn has long ears and no tail. You all began to think of some animal as soon as I said 'ears' and 'tail' and you couldn't get it out of your heads."

"But I don't see why you had to say anything about its tail at all," said the Scare Crow peevishly. "When it hasn't got any."

"Just to fool you," said Nick.

"Guessing games are no fun if you make them too easy."

"That's why I made mine hard, about the mouse," said Puss in Boots, stroking his whiskers.

"Why, it wasn't hard at all. You just about told us what it was," said the Hi Diddle Diddle Cat.

"Sir!" exclaimed Puss in Boots.

"Let's play something else," said Nancy to make peace.

"Let's play 'London Bridge,'" said

THE CHINESE MUST PUT THEIR HOUSE IN ORDER

Silas H. Strawn, special American commissioner to China, has evidently learned something of oriental skill in softening the bluntness of diplomacy.

He announces that America is willing to go beyond the terms of the Washington treaty in granting tariff relief to China, but adds that the United States must be advised of the plan for the abolition of the "Hikin" system, and for putting it into effect coincidentally with tariff autonomy.

That effectively "passes the buck" to the Chinese. For, in the past, doing away with "Hikin" was just what no Chinese government was able to do. These "Hikin" taxes are tariff impostes collected by the separate provinces or local governments at their own frontiers, on goods in transit, in addition to whatever national duties may have been collected at the port of entry.

It is easy to abolish these duties on paper. But what Commissioner Strawn asks for is a plan for abolishing them in fact.

So long as the local authorities are stronger than the central government, and will not obey its orders, something more than a paper prohibition is needed. China will get tariff autonomy as soon as it is autonomous in its own affairs. But until the Chinese government can govern China, foreign powers must continue methods of protecting themselves, which would be preposterous in a really self-governing nation.

The League of Nations dedicated the session in which the stoppage of the war between Greece and Bulgaria was announced, to the memory of Woodrow Wilson. It was the voice of history, speaking on a historic occasion.

How long it will be before America does full justice to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, only time can tell.

But there can be no question that the words of Briand, in his tribute to Wilson, were the voices of permanent history, in America as well as in Europe, giving to Woodrow Wilson his just place as the author of the only constructive result of the war, and the founder of a new world order.

of war come into our very innermost chambers and snatch the infants from our coats? Then she thought wrongly, and with her unjust and undue tactics awakened the great powers which were to be unloosed upon her with vengeance at whatever cost to ourselves and with no gain for ourselves at all. I recall here a story which I read several years ago about an Irishman coming to this country to visit a sister. He arrived late in town and went to a small hotel to seek lodging. He was compelled to sleep with a colored man on account of everything else being taken. He was extremely tired and slept soundly. Someone thought it would be a joke to paint his face black during the night and did so. The colored man arose early and went to his work; the Irishman slept on. It was late when he was called and seeing the time dressed hurriedly and without looking in the mirror or washing, rushed out, and over to his sister's house. He was overjoyed to see her and showed it, but she repulsed him and said she was not his sister. After a short argument she said, well if you think you are not a colored man come on in and look in the mirror. He did. He too was astonished and exclaimed, "Well and be jabbers, if they haven't gone and awakened the wrong man." Central Europe had awakened the wrong man. We were slow to move in anger, but quick to rescue and service when needed, and America struck with all her force and broke the strange hold of Mars upon the world. Our War President, Woodrow Wilson

We may not have nor yet do, agree with President Wilson, we may even have criticized him for numerous things he did. And yet, as long as the human memory lasts he will always be remembered as a Man of Noble Idealism and indisputable integrity. He dreamed the dream of a great soul and rendered a service with his Fourteen Points and conception of a World League which shall eventually solve the question of International peace. He was noble, sincere and serene. The fact that he lost the confidence of the American people, when he came back from Europe, and begged America to accept the League of Nations, broke his heart. He returned to Washington but a shadow of his former self and finally to retire from public life weary and downcast. He paid a price for his service which can hardly be calculated in words.

The Price of War
When you try to sum up the mass of human being which we have offered as burned and charred sacrifices to the God of War, it calls forth the strongest language possible in the vocabulary of man or gods. When you think of crushed mothers hearts, wearied sorrowing dads, wives and sweethearts who will mourn so long as time lets them live here, and nothing but a reuniting of their loved ones in the great beyond will ever heal the wound, we find that such a summing up is startling, astounding and humiliating to us who claim to be human, much less Christian. Think of over ten million dead, and over twenty million injured or totally incapacitated for life, think of the billions we spent, the mortgage we placed on ourselves and our children and children's children for the next ten or twenty generations. I feel that if I should ever encourage such a thing again I would want to hide my face in shame and beg the God of Justice to forever keep me covered. Can we afford to tolerate in our midst any measure which will ever duplicate the past, or shall we with grace and wisdom, wipe the skum from our dim visions and behold more clearly the human race and the purpose for which it has come to be?

Sky High

A lofty outlook on the world has Jim Doyle, veteran steeplejack, as he paints a flagpole atop a 23 story building in New York.

The poor old ignorant fellow who got his bill from the grocery store found many an item registered there he did not understand about. Here was sugar $1, ditto $1, potatoes 50 cents and ditto 50 cents, and after each item was found ditto, now what was this ditto. He was going to find out. He went to the grocer and said his wife declares she never bought any ditto and as far as they were concerned they were not going to pay for any ditto either, and with anger he accused the grocer of adding to the bill. This made the grocer angry and he informed the man that, "You go home and tell your wife she is a fool and you are the ditto."

Now brothers in the Republic I ask you to advance yourself and not ditto any past experience and make fools of ourselves.

Measures to Prevent War

We must think clearly and deliberately. It may be a hard way but we may be able to save the world from utter ruin if we do. It will pay us to use mental sweat and intellectual labor rather than physical force. We should think justly with a careful appreciation of another's point of view. This must be done, non-commercially, non-politically, and without personal consideration of personal gain. We can never again ever use the slaughter of our race for material profit. It is one of the most crying shames of the world today, that Americans made huge profits out of the war. And it is not out of our credit yet that while other nations starve to death, we are buying the fastest seller of all books in print, How to Reduce. We must beware lest our nation become a gluttonous, goulsh nation with but a greed for wealth and a material soul.

Humanity

What is the idea of humanity to us? It is not a color, race nor a nation. We can not think of humanity as just a favorable few who have all the rights and others to be our servants. May I say to you, brothers, that as a white race we are far in the minority and only about one third of the entire human race, and if we are not more zealous to preserve ourselves, we shall be swallowed up. We must think of all peoples as humanity, and if we are conceited enough to think we have advanced further than any other part of humanity, to preserve ourselves we must help raise all men to our level, and give them the same chances in life we ourselves demand and receive. If we do that we will find the level of humanity on such a plane that a mutual love and respect will inhabit all peoples and the spirit of Universal brotherhood will make it safe for all of us. We entered into the war with the slogan "Make the World Safe for Democracy." While we are sober and have our right minds, and have clothed ourselves we can and must, under God for the sake of preserving ourselves build careful and consistently barriers against another wave of burning flames which shall devour us all. Now is the time for us to act, let us not wait, let us make it known to all, and especially to our president, senators and congressmen that we are a peace loving people and we do not want them nor any other nation to violate the integrity of our souls by misrepresentation. We demand of them they shall represent our idealism and not a political interest. We have solved no problems in all the world's history by war, and we have prevented more wars since the peace pact at Paris than by any other means since the dawn of history. We have the world court; it is at present the best instrument we have to negotiate since the dawn of history. We have the world court; it is the best, at least at present, instrument we have to settle our world problems. We have our own courts, where we as citizens of this country settle our disputes. Shall we be human beings nationally and anarchists internationally.

God

In this field I feel at home. I feel that we have cramped our thinking about God. We have held him as some One who was just Ours. He has been thought of as belonging to a nation. He was and is for some God with us, and to hell with the rest. We have thought Him as a mere pigmy, a racial, tribal, a color, or a race God. Some have even gone so far as to consider him a sectarian God, a Methodist God, Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregational, Christian, Protestant or Catholic God. My brothers he is none of these. He is a world God. And if I could stretch your soul and understanding to take in all that means you would never live within the tiny groove of any of the aforeaid characteristics. Let us conceive the vastness of His greatness; let us think in terms of his great sympathies, and stretch our arms around the whole wide world and say: This is God's world, and we are God's people, let us from now on and forevermore be brothers.

Joliet—James O'Neill, state policeman, by bouncing the rear of his "bike" with its red light probably saved the lives of many football fan motorists near here Saturday night. It became known today. Sixteen cars had gone into the ditch at a sharp curve when he arrived. By bouncing his cycle he was able to stop several hundred oncoming automobiles before they struck the ditch.

IOWA AIMS TITLE WRECKING BLAST AT MINNESOTA U

Give Gophers Acid Test on Their Claim for Big Ten Leadership

Chicago, Nov. 12—(AP)—The leadership of the Big Ten title race that Minnesota holds because it has a tie in its only conference game gets an acid test in the annual Iowa game this week.

The game may untie the knotted standings of the league contenders, as also may the Michigan-Ohio and Northwestern-Purdue meetings.

Iowa believes a dry field, allowing a spirited aerial attack, can turn the tide in its favor. Kutsch, leading conference point scorer, is pegging the ball to Smith of Schirmer and is the nucleus of a running offense like that which beat Illinois. Wesley Fry, a good mudder in the Ohio State game, is the center of preparations for a wet field.

Gary Out of Game.
Mike Gary, Minnesota's best tackle, is out of the game with an injured foot. Alquist may have to wear a metal brace to protect his badly bruised face, but otherwise the protégé of Dr. Spears are primed for a hard battle.

The condition of the field when Ohio State comes to Ann Arbor governs the Wolverine lineup. Yost has a set of heaves for soggy ground and some lightweights for a fast field. Marek and Karow, the Buckeye ground gainers are being rested in practice but are being counted on to take a prominent part in the game.

Speed is Northwestern's plan to down Purdue, which is polishing its offense. Baker, Purple back, is in good condition and is trying out at quarter. Merkobrad, Purple star, is not in the best of shape and is being given only light work. Wilson, Taube and Wilcox are likely to hear the brunt for Purdue.

Entrench For Green Attack.
Chicago has a defense ready for Dartmouth that it hopes will turn the Green wave into a harmless ripple. It is designed primarily to break up aerial plays, which are expected to be the easterner's forte. "Five Yards" McMarty, Francis, Timme and Lampe are the mainstays of the attack.

Quarterly examinations are bringing a letup to Notre Dame's workouts for Carnegie Tech.

Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, meeting Wabash, Rose Poly and the Michigan Aggies, respectively, are tapering off rehearsals.

Did You Ever Stop to Think—

BY
E. R. Waite, Secretary,
Shawnee, Okla. Board of Commerce

THAT oftentimes in a city you find a bunch of "calamity howlers."

THAT they spend much time in trying to tear down and no time whatever in trying to build up.

THAT they are always lamenting somebody else's shortcomings and never think of their own.

THAT the most they howl about is imaginary anyway; most of them howl just for the love of making a noise, with the hopes of attracting attention to themselves.

THAT if these howlers would turn around and get on the right track and use their influence and energy to constructive work, they would make quite a change in many communities.

THAT to boost always brings results.

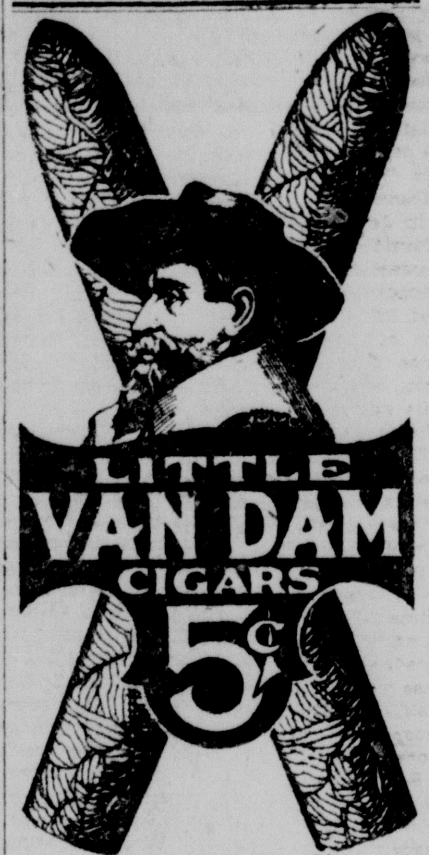

GOOD DISPOSITIONS INVALUABLE

You can't watch your disposition too carefully. A crab and a grouch are rarely successful. If your liver and stomach are in an unhealthy condition you can not have a sunny disposition because they affect the brain as well as the entire system. May's Wonderful Remedy has been usually successful in such cases. Our advice to everyone troubled in this way, especially when accompanied with bloating in the stomach, is to try this remedy. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. At all druggists.—Adv.

HERE is the factory that stands behind our recommendation of Atwater Kent Sets and Radio Speakers. It covers more ground than ten football fields or sixty-four baseball diamonds.

It was built large to meet the demand for Atwater Kent Radio and because this company is in Radio to stay.

Eventually, many radio manufacturers may disappear. The survivors will be those who have the soundest product and know their business.

"And This, I Just Adore!"

The June bride is now busily engaged in housekeeping. And with what pride she points to the beautiful Copper-Clad Range in her bright, cheery kitchen. Do you blame her? She is proud to start out with a range as fine in every respect as the Copper-Clad.

In wonderful modern kitchens the country over, you'll find the Copper-Clad Range, not only because of its exceptional beauty, but because of its many efficient construction features.

The Copper-Clad is lined with pure sheet copper which prevents the walls rusting through from the inside. This makes the Copper-Clad last-years and years longer than any other range.

Between the copper lining and outside wall the Copper-Clad has an air space. This air space, or thermo construction, makes it possible to cook and bake with a small amount of fuel. No other range made has four walls and an air space.

All nickel parts on the Copper-Clad as well as the door panels and range body are smooth; free from grooves, notches, latches, catches, rivet heads and bolt heads. This makes the Copper-Clad the easiest range on earth to keep clean.

Go to one of the merchants listed below and let him explain to you the 30 Interesting Reasons Why Copper-Clad is the World's Greatest Range!

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

"Get ready your robes for the Lord's coming," exhorted the revivalist in the Christian meeting last night; "but remember they are robes of righteousness, and you can't know the day you'll need them; so have them ready. You make elaborate preparations for every journey of life, except the one that is most universal in human experience, the journey across the river of death."

"How can you neglect this matter through the years, and then in the crisis of death's approach act as if you expect God to place a through ticket for you in your hands? Five virgins in Jesus' parable were foolish, and found a closed door; and you can't fool away the years of your strength and opportunity, and then throw your wasted life at Jesus' feet in one final spasm of repentance, and have assurance that He will open heaven for you, who have previously scorned all His appeals and invitations."

"The virgins' oil could not be shared. The best Christian will have no virtue, no merit to divide. If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? Make ready, oh, make ready your own supply, from His rich storehouse of grace! And keep ready! At one time all ten of the virgins were prepared, but time revealed the full preparedness of the five, and the carelessness of the others. Do it for yourself, and do it now. Post-mortem gospels along with proxy religions are foreign to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures."

The sermon was particularly strong in its warning to luke-warm church members, who are, in Mr. Williamson's opinion, an outstanding hindrance to soul winning work today.

The Rev. F. Brandt, of the Pine Creek Evangelical church was present, and led in prayer. Since the evangelist decided not to go to Pine Creek last night, a considerable number from that community was in the audience, and C. W. Stauffer of the Pine Creek church of the Brethren offered the closing prayer.

Last night closed the second week of the meetings, in which eighteen have responded to the call for converts. In all probability the Revival will end with Wednesday evening's service, and over a dozen of the congregation will accompany Mr. Williamson home on Thursday, and attend a One Day Church Convention in his Rock Island church. Miss Graves will be of the party, and will sing at the convention sessions.

The sermon tonight will be "The Crisis in Division" tomorrow night, "No Room in the Inn." Miss Graves will sing two solos at each of these services.

LETTER FROM MRS. MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO PRISCILLA BRADFORD

My Dear Priscilla:

I confess I was very much surprised to hear from you, but I was not surprised when I noted the contents of your letter. I knew the moment I looked and found your name at the end of it that I should find something very disagreeable between your salutation and your signature. However, I read it through to the end.

It is rather strange that I did not connect the charming, up-to-date man of the world whom I met at Atlantic City this summer, by the people of his name to whom I rented my house, but, you see, he did not mention he had a brother, let alone one who lived in Bradford. Consequently I did not think to ask him if he was any relative of theirs.

As for your spreading the news in my letter, my dear Priscilla, I know you will be only too glad to do so. That is the reason why I am writing it to you. I am sorry, however, that I shall have to take half your pleasure away in telling everybody what is in it by not forbidding you to do so. In the first place, let me say that I am wearing my skirts at the length prescribed by the best fashion experts. I have gone a great deal into society in New York, Atlantic City and Pittsburgh and neither my son nor my daughter-in-law would want me to look like a dowdy.

I also have a beautiful dinner gown of silver lace and because I do not like the joke Nature played upon me by making my lovely thick hair an ugly pepper and salt hue, I have had it expertly changed back to the bronze color which you will no doubt remember being the color of my hair some years ago.

I am quite sorry if this will not meet the approval of my old friends and neighbors. It ought to give them a great deal of pleasure, however, as they can gossip about it to their hearts' content.

I can't imagine Mr. Orson Gibson living in Bradford. He is a very polite gentleman and he probably said the things that he knew the people about him would like him to say. Unless I feel very differently from what I do now, I shall never go back to Bradford to live, but under no circumstances shall I sell the old house and furniture. They are a part of the history of my family, a part of it, of which I am very proud, as you know.

However, you may tell the Rev. Smalley for me that I have not as yet done anything to shame my ancestry and I do not expect to do so, although my skirts at the present moment are nine inches from the ground and my latest dinner dress has no sleeves. You may tell him that if he wishes to read this letter in church, he has my full permission. Sincerely yours, MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT.

TELEGRAM FROM RUTH BURKE TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

I am in great trouble. Can you come to me immediately? Walter has been shot accidentally through the foot and they are bringing him home from his hunting and fishing trip today.

RUTH.

Telegram From Leslie Prescott to Ruth Burke

Leaving tonight. Will be with you tomorrow. Don't worry any more than you can help. I will stay with you as long as you need me.

LESLIE.

Telephone Conversation Between John Alden Prescott and Leslie Prescott

"Is that you Sally? This is Leslie. Is Jack there?"

"Yes, Leslie, I think he is in the outer office. I will call him."

"What's the matter, Leslie? Sally says you want to talk to me. Is anything wrong with the children?"

"No, dear, for once everything seems to be all right in the Prescott family, but I am leaving for Buffalo tonight."

"What's all the hurry, Leslie?"

"I've just had a wire from Ruth. She says that Walter has had an accident on that hunting and fishing excursion of his. He has been shot through the foot. He will arrive home tomorrow. I'm going over tonight so as to be there when he arrives."

"That is certainly hard luck for Ruth. Do you want me to come home and get things ready?"

"No, I haven't much to do here. I want you, Jack, to arrange for my transportation and I shall have to depend upon you to keep the peace between Mrs. Prescott and Hannah while I am gone. I wish you would persuade your mother to take a trip somewhere. She was talking some time ago about going back to her old home. Maybe she will do that while I am gone."

"I'll do my best, dear, but you know I am not much good in domestic affairs."

"Jack, will you please tell Sally what I have told you and tell her that she must tell Miss Penner if I do not get back in time to see her, what is keeping me away? When you come up tonight you had better bring Sally with you because I know that she will remember all this things that I have to tell you better than you will do it yourself."

"All right, Leslie, dear. I'll go immediately and get your transportation."

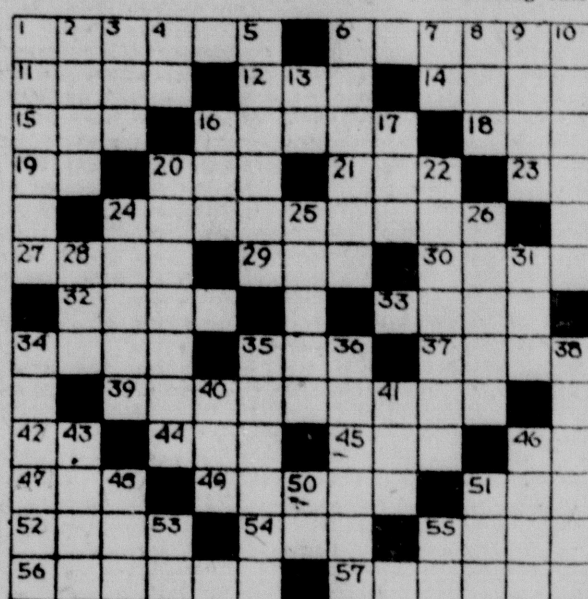

"Good-bye, Jack, until this evening."

Tomorrow—Telegram from Leslie Prescott to John Alden Prescott.

That "pay-day smile" when you smoke P. A.

WHEN a fellow's happy as a spring robin, he's just got to show it. Face lighted up like a sample house. Look at those jimmy-pipers all around you. You can't tell whether they've just got a raise, or whether they've been mentioned in a rich uncle's will.

But here's the secret: They've discovered Prince Albert! Just you tuck a neat wad of P. A. into the muzzle of that little old jimmy-pipe and make fire with a match. Man, alive. Here's tobacco as IS tobacco. Mellow. Mild. A win in every draw.

No other tobacco is like Prince Albert. Cool and sweet and fragrant. Not a nip or a scorch in a barrel of it. The Prince Albert process cuts out bite and parch, and develops a tobacco flavor that has solace and satisfaction written all over it.

Quality tobacco and no mistake. Quantity too! There are TWO full ounces in every tidy red tin. (Look at the revenue stamp.) Get together now—you and your jimmy-pipe and Prince Albert. Step around the corner and tell the man you want a tidy red tin of P. A. Then you're set for real smoke-sport.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidor, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Look at the U. S. revenue stamp—there are TWO full ounces in every tin.

PRINCE ALBERT

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore, disguised as a nun, and young David Lacy, whom she met tonight for the first time, had just boarded a ferry to cross Long Island Sound from Connecticut, when a hairy stranger approached them and announced, mysteriously, "I'm Pooch." Back in Aunt Celina's Connecticut home is a worried company. Before midnight Connemara came to announce her engagement to Bing Carrington or Salt Adams—or he disappeared. But, instead, she disappeared, leaving two very nervous suitors.

There were only a few cars ahead of them, and Lacy worked up quickly behind the green Packard. The moon was full. It was one of those rare nights which make June so popular for weddings and outdoor drinking. Ahead the road unwound in a gray, luminous band. Higher and higher rose the hum of the motors as the two cars shook off the ferry traffic and raced past the tented nomads of Bayville.

Pooch leaned forward. "Here is the jack," he said. "I didn't want to give it to you on the ferry. Never tell who's nosin' round. I want to get shock of it, though. I'll give it to you, sis. You can stock it for the boss here. He's workin' now. Count it. There's fifty grand there. Thank God, that's gone!"

A thick roll of bills bound with an elastic band was placed in Sister Connemara's hand as they lurched around a curve with the speedometer wavering around forty-five. Mechanically she leaned forward to the dashboard light, removed the strap, and counted the money. Fifty brand new, fluttering thousand-dollar notes! Rolling them up, she hesitated a moment and then with sudden determination tucked them inside the voluminous folds of her nun's habit.

"I think there's been an accident," Connemara was moved to explain.

Pooch again: "That damn Pierce's cousin up. Drive up to the Packard and I'll tell 'em to take her out of second. That bunch ought to be backin' for some funeral parlor."

The big Isotta leaped ahead with a warning croak—from the horn. Trees, fences, hedges, softly lit houses flashed past in crazy panorama. Rounding a corner on the wrong side of the road, they left a Ford sedan stranded in the ditch. Gradually they drew up to the Packard. Pooch cupped his hands and shouted, and the wind tore his words away. The Packard driver seemed to understand, however, for he increased his speed and took the lead once more.

Through the deserted streets of Glen Cove to the two racing cars. A sleepy policeman leaning against the bank at the four corners roused himself sufficiently to stagger to the curb and open his mouth several times after the retreating tail lights. On past the Engineers, through Sea Cliff and up the winding hill flanking Roslyn Harbor. They were approaching Roslyn.

At the four corners where the North Hempstead turnpike joins the Sea Cliff road there was a right-angle turn. Both cars threw on all their brakes and skidded into the main street. Down the hill and through the town they tore, to the delight of the few village story-tellers assembled in front of the local Greek's around the Corner. Behind them a Pierce runaway, its mudguards leaving a scar on the dummy cop as its swayed past. The patrons of the local Greek cheered.

KINGDOM CIRCLE HELD MEETING

Kingdom—Fifty of the members of the Community Circle met at the John Bachman home last Friday evening. The usual bountiful supper was served after which a short program was given as follows: vocal solo, Miss Ora Floto; reading, Florence Gates; piano duet, Mrs. Fred Gates and Katherine; Reading, Morris Sanford. After the program a business meeting was held and the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: George Floto, president; William Morris, vice president; Leonard Stevens, secretary and treasurer. The remainder of the evening was given over to social chat and visiting. There will not be another meeting for four weeks as on the regular meeting night, Nov. 20, there will be a basket social at the school house for the benefit of the school.

Morris Sanford has purchased a new roadster. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Travis of Beloit, Wis., are at the home of her father, C. J. Livingston for a short time.

swung suddenly to the left into the Mineola road. Whether Lacy could not make the turn or whether he did not want to was not clear. The Isotta wavered for a fraction of a second and then went thundering up the Roslyn hill toward New York. The driver of a motor bus coming in the opposite direction stopped and, leaning from his seat, started to express his opinion of drivers who did not dim their lights. He stopped in the middle of a withering line and gazed open-mouthed at the spark-spitting black streak that swept up the long grade as if it did not exist. As he started again the lights of the following Pierce broke full in his eyes. Throwing his wheel to the right, he buried the nose of the bus in the clay bank beside the road. Two sleepy passengers picked themselves off the floor, promising to have him discharged for reckless driving.

Faster and faster, they shot on toward Manhasset. Connemara clutched the side of the car with one hand and with the other pressed hard against her cow. Two cars appeared going in opposite directions half a mile ahead. An instant later the Isotta was between them. The lurching tonneau touched the small sedan on its right. A sound resulted as of someone striking a dishpan with his knuckles. The sedan partly overturned and came to rest against a post.

A shot sounded from the back seat. Lacy's first thought was for his tires. He glanced back. Pooch had knocked out the back window and was kneeling on the seat, a revolver pointed through the opening.

There was another report, but this time from the front of the car. The right front tire went careening along the ditch beside them. The hood leaped into the air. Lacy jammed on the brakes, but it was too late. Like a creature in its death throes, the car staggered back and forth across the road twice. There was a ripping of steel through wood. The Pierce passed them, stopped fifty yards down the road, then backed to the wreck. Two men with drawn revolvers got out.

CHAPTER VI

Meade Minnerode

By Meade Minnerode

A discouraging odor—one of those odors which disengage themselves from catastrophes—or rather, a concatenation of viciously incompatible odors—arose into the tenuous June night air like a flight of very bad angels. Showers of stars, so it seemed momentarily to Connemara, sprinkled the vault of heaven with pyrotechnic splendor. There was a hissing and a sputtering, a clanking and crunching, and above the uproar the steady booming of enraged profanity. It proceeded from the overturned sedan, a man's voice complaining, bitterly and monotonously, like an intermittent foghorn.

"What the blazes did you go and do that for?" he kept inquiring, invisibly persistent.

"I think there's been an accident!" Connemara was moved to explain, but the man was not satisfied—nor, when she came to view the situation more critically, was Connemara.

And what an accident! A sedan overturned in one ditch, imprisoning a very angry gentleman who would probably have a devil of a time explaining matters afterward to his wife. The Isotta plastered like a mashed turnip against a telegraph pole in the other ditch, after having bounced Mr. Pooch out into the road on one side and Connemara herself sitting somewhat incongruously on the spokes of the right front wheel, spinning slowly around like a spent roulette ball just before it flips into the wrong compartment. And just in front the Pierce, from whose depths had come those two personages impending in the shadows with drawn revolvers, who appeared to be waiting for the whites of somebody's eyes!

Connemara made herself aware of these details in one comprehensive glance. At the same time, while she still revolved physically on her spinning wheel, she likewise did so mentally around the more saliently depressing social aspects of her present situation.

ALL RUN DOWN, NOW HEALTHY

"Honestly, in all my 15 years of experience as a nurse I have never known of a medicine that compares with Tanlac." is the glowing tribute of Nurse M. E. Chappelle.

"Time and again I have recommended Tanlac and always with surprising results. Some time ago my mother complained of being generally run down and on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had no appetite, her stomach was disordered, digestion weakened and her bowels were most irregular.

"Tanlac came to her aid at once, brought on a vigorous appetite, that she began to eat with the greatest relish, and made the digestive organs function properly once more. In a short time she was well, happy and strong, and although over 80 years of age she is now vigorous enough to look after her household duties and go out quite as usual. This is why I praise Tanlac and consider it the best tonic and health builder ever discovered.

"What Tanlac has done for others it can also do for you. Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation. Made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

SYNOPSIS
Connemara Moore and David Lacy, strangers, until tonight, are racing across Long Island in David's car. In the ferry, crossing from Connecticut, a stranger, announcing himself as "Pooch," had joined them. Pooch, now in the back seat, has just leaned over and handed the mystified girl a big roll of bills. Back in Aunt Celine's Connecticut home is a worried company. Connie was to have announced her engagement tonight—to Bing Carrington or Salt Adams—but, instead, she has disappeared.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

And what a situation! Midnight thereabouts. Somewhere between Manhasset Bay and Hempstead Harbor; Connemara Moore in a broken-down—not to say up—car in the company of two strangers, obviously of nefarious calling, bent on criminal endeavor. For there could be no doubt about it; Mr. Pooch, of course—with his fifty thousand dollars which Connemara could hear crackling in one of the more intimate recesses of her costume—but also Mr. Whatever-his-name-was. A nice young man too. A little slow on the uptake, perhaps, although he had picked her up fast enough, Connemara was forced to admit. Yes, a nice young man—a little less than Salt and more than Bing, which was probably just about the right combination—but a crook, a crook, Connemara reminded herself. A fifty-thousand-dollar crook!

"I wish he hadn't been a crook. I really do," Connemara remarked sadly to herself. She certainly had no intention of associating herself Soon a darker shadow proclaimed a boat at anchor in the deeper water, with any bright young stranger who appeared to be headed for Atlanta or some other federal resort, unless he were dead back there in the road, which seemed not unlikely. Where was everybody, anyway? Connemara's wheel came to a stop—it could only have been a few seconds since the crash—and Connemara found herself staring at the two individuals from the Pierce who had now advanced much closer. "What goes on, Ku Klux?" one of them inquired.

A flashlight blinked in her face, blinding her, and at the same moment there was the crack of a revolver over her shoulder. Connemara felt a hand on her arm, found herself jerked backward onto the road, heard the inimitable accents of Mr. Pooch in her ear, "You come with me, kid—over the speckled sands!"

"But Mr.—Mr.—your friend!" Connemara protested, and wondered why.

"To hell with him!" Mr. Pooch announced, dragging her after him into the shadows. "He'll have to look out for himself with them highjackers. Guess perhaps he's croaked, anyway!"

Yes, perhaps so. Anyway, there was nothing to be done now but follow Mr. Pooch, much as a tender follows its engine. As for the nice young man—let him go, the fifty-thousand-dollar crook.

Which was exactly what David Lacy was saying to himself from his place of precarious concealment in the ditch in which he was picking odds and ends out of his hair. She was a nice girl—more than that, mysterious, charming, alluring; David Lacy allowed himself the world, intriguing.

But she was a crook—no question about it, a friend of that poisonous Pooch, who had recognized her and given her money. Too much money.

TO MY FARMER FRIENDS.
Come in next time you are in Dixon and I will cheerfully tell you of the high-class insurance company's I represent. Do not delay. Your barn, your house, your auto may burn within the next 24 hours. Come before it's too late. Hal Bardwell, 119 East First St., Dixon, Ill.

House cleaning time is here. Before starting in supply yourself with a roll of our white paper for pantry shelves and bureau drawers. Price 10c to 50c a roll. B. F. Shaw Printing Co.

It was all too bad—too damn bad—but let her go, the fifty-thousand-dollar crook.

"Good riddance," David Lacy decided under his breath. "You—you Whited Sepulcher!"

In spite of which he found himself wriggling along the ditch, in the direction taken by Mr. Pooch and that smooth-tongued young deception.

For perhaps the first time in her vivid young life, things were happening almost too fast for Connemara. She was able, usually, to pluck at least the tail feathers, as it were, from any passing event, but on this occasion the needle of Connemara's mental recording apparatus was seismic in its evolutions upon the chart of her perceptions. She was being dragged along madly through the dark by the snorting Mr. Pooch. Behind her on the road a commotion of voices and revolver shots bespoke an increasing tumult, in the midst of which the gentleman in the overtaken sedan could still be heard, plaintively abusive.

"What you firing at me for?" he kept inquiring. "What do you think I am, a shooting gallery?"

Aside from that, Connemara found herself just a breath or two behind the pageant of human events rocketing past her—in fact, she found herself entirely out of breath, in her enforced attempt to keep pace with the fugitive Pooch, whose grasp upon her arm had not for a moment, needless to say, relaxed. Mr. Pooch was straining across open fields, hurrying himself through hedges, bounding over ditches, decanting himself on the further side of only too frequently recurring fences, and wherever Mr. Pooch went, Connemara was obliged to follow, a reluctant, gasping, willy-nilly tail to his comet, much encumbered by her nun's attire.

At last there was a sandy slope, the sudden level of a deserted beach, a glimmer of water at sight of which Mr. Pooch went into reverse. Connemara sat down at once.

"Wh-wh-wh—" she remarked, and Mr. Pooch laughed.

"All in, ain't you, kid?" he grinned at her. "Pretty light on my feet for a heavy guy, I am. No time to lose back there; had to make our get-away."

"You n-needn't have b-bothered about me," Connemara assured him, and Mr. Pooch roared with mirth.

"Zat so?" he chuckled. "Say, kid, you're a hot one. Think I'd leave you behind with all that dough for them highjackers to get their hooks on? Now everything's going to be fine—you just stick with me and you'll wear diamonds!"

With this dazzling prospect in view, Connemara rose to her protesting feet, for the good and simple reason that Mr. Pooch had begun to move forward again—his hand, if anything, firmer upon her arm—prospecting along the beach. A few hundred yards away they came to a dinghy, a black dinghy with a white bottom, fast in the sand. Mr. Pooch shoved the boat clear with one hand and turned to Connemara.

"In you get," he commanded, "and sit in the stern—that's the square end—where I can see you, my girl!"

Connemara sat in the stern, and Mr. Pooch climbed in after her and possessed himself of the oars.

"Now we'll look for this baby's mother," he remarked and began to row, sloppily but not without results, for soon a darker shadow proclaimed a boat at anchor in the deeper water—a small power yacht, black with a white bottom showing when she rose on her line.

"Ain't no one aboard," Mr. Pooch observed, and let the dinghy bump. But Mr. Pooch was wrong. There was someone aboard, who manifested himself from the tenebrous cockpit in the form of a genial voice heavily freighted with Scotch—both linguistically and liquidly speaking.

"Hooray!" said a voice, somewhat unexpectedly.

"Hooray yourself!" Mr. Pooch replied. "What time is it?"

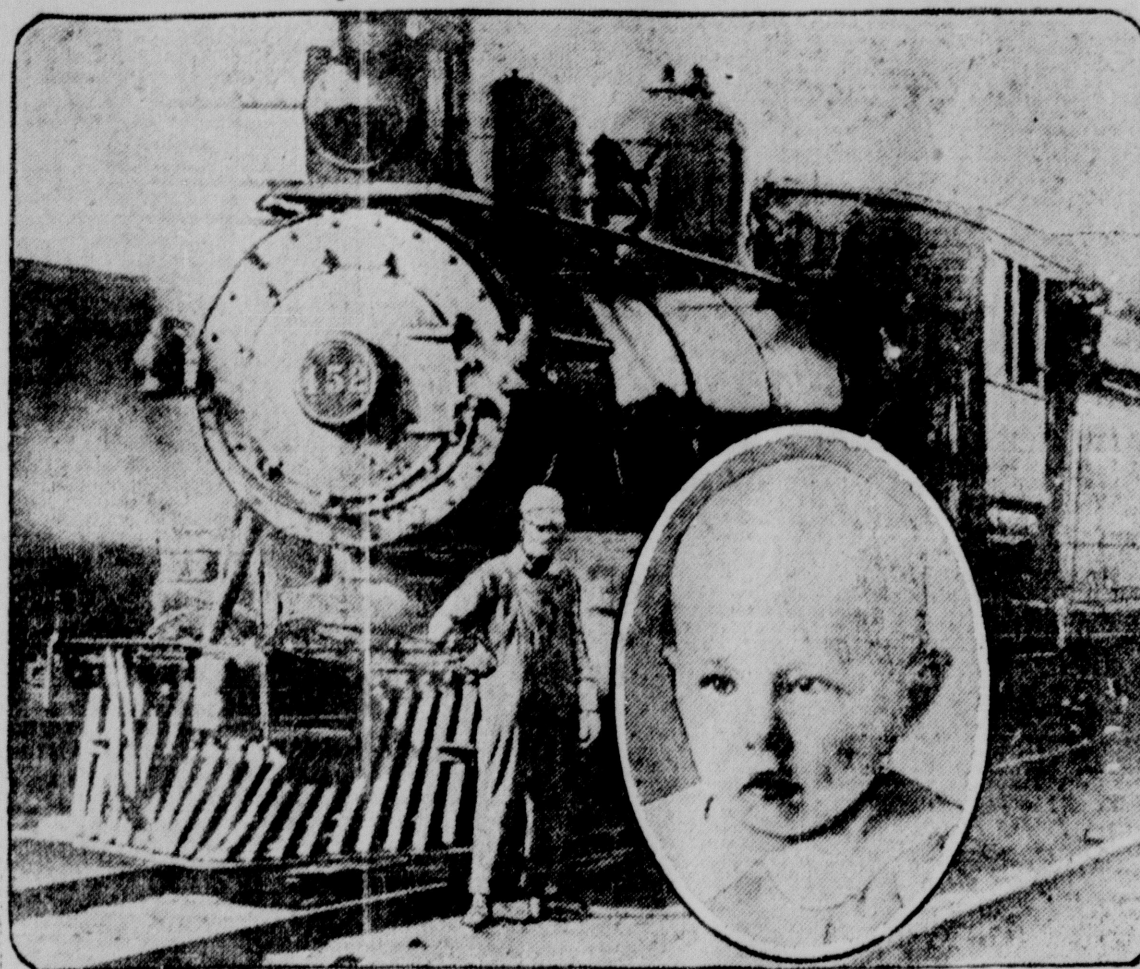

"Nine bells," the voice assured him. "Nine bells, daylight-savin' time. Come right aboard and have 'more coffee!"

"We'll do that little thing," Mr. Pooch chuckled, and helped Connemara up the side, much as a policeman helps a prisoner into the van.

The voice in the cockpit revealed itself as a little man in a white-visored cap, grinning delightedly from ear to ear. He was, it was evident, fatted, bloated, ossified, in short drunk, as only a Scotchman can be.

Saves Baby From Beneath Speeding Engine

Baby Cecil Kelsner, aged 2, of Stamford, Neb., owes his life to the heroism of Fireman Jack Hardy. Cecil had toddled out on the railway tracks near his home. The engine was unable to stop. So Hardy climbed out of the cab and went ahead to the pilot. Leaning forward, he grabbed the child from the locomotive's path and held him clear of the rails. Then, losing his balance, he had to toss Cecil flat between the rails to keep from falling with him. Cecil was unhurt, though the engine and two cars passed over him. Hardy is shown above beside his engine, with Cecil in the inset.

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, United States
Public Health Service

Asthma is not a definite condition resulting from a certain, definite cause. Asthmatics, those who suffer from asthma, are in many cases sensitive to certain proteins. A fairly large proportion of asthmatic cases are without doubt due to over-sensitiveness to certain proteins. This, individuals who have asthma when in contact with horses are sensitive to a protein discharged from their bodies.

A patient, as a rule, will state that sensitized also to proteins from various other sources—emanations which rise from cats and dogs—emanations from feathers, certain food proteins, when eaten, the more common of which are rye, corn, wheat, rice, potatoes, eggs, milk, fish, lobster beef, and chicken.

It appears also that a few asthmatics are sensitive to fruits, such as strawberries, apples and peaches. Others are sensitive to pollens, particularly the pollen of timothy and ragweed, and still others to bacterial proteins. Some cases of asthma are secondary manifestations of other diseases. In such cases, the symptoms depend largely upon the organ attacked and the disease which is present.

Asthma attacks may be manifested in different ways. In some cases the attack begins with suddenness and without warning. In other cases, a patient experiences sensations which he recognizes immediately as fore-warnings of an attack.

A patient, as a rule, will state that he knew an attack was coming on because of an itching of the nose, a cough or feeling of illness accompanied by restlessness and discomfort. In other cases, a patient experiences a condition of great mental excitement. In still others, loss of appetite is recognized as a symptom but, in the majority of cases the attack begins during the night, sometimes with abruptness—more often, by slow degrees and the patient may not be aware that asthma is threatening.

In some individuals, the attack of asthma, or the paroxysm as it is called, occurs usually at a certain hour. In case the onset is sudden, the patient may be awakened from a sound sleep with a feeling of intense suffocation. In some cases, this sensation slowly increases and does not become acute for an hour or more.

The duration of an attack, if not relieved, shows wide variation from a few minutes to several hours. An attack of asthma subsides gradually and the patient usually falls asleep. The attacks may be repeated daily for a week or more. They may be followed by a long comparatively free interval, but this may depend upon the presence or absence of the cause. Mild attacks of bronchial asthma may be difficult to distinguish from acute bronchitis.

Despite the severity of asthmatic attacks and the suffering which they entail, asthma is generally not included among those diseases which shorten life.

It is very difficult to give you helpful information regarding the treatment of asthma or to advise just what climate best suits one who is suffering from asthma. The causes are so varied that physicians have found it almost impossible before-hand to tell what effect any particular climate may have upon the disease.

As regards dust, it should be remembered that it is not the amount of dust in the atmosphere that is important, but the kind of dust; in other words, an attack of asthma may depend largely upon the source of the foreign protein to which the patient is sensitive.

Only your physician can give you the necessary attention. If he is not able to discover the cause of this trouble, he will be in a position to refer you to some specialist who will make your condition the subject of further examination and study, and you may find if you follow this course that the clearing up of your asthma may require little more than the cutting of weeds about your house or the removal of certain plants, the pollen of which may be responsible for your trouble possibly or the avoidance of feather pillows.

R. E. Davies, 1214 W. Third St., says: "I had dull, throbbing pains in the small of my back and when I bent over and tried to straighten, sharp, stabbing pains caught me across my kidneys. Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight.

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. R. L.—Adv.

Too Much Efficiency By E.J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN W. BROOKE, widower, hardware manufacturer, contracts with a firm of efficiency engineers to have his home managed for a period of two months which he expects to spend away from the city. He fails to tell Constance, Billy and Alice, his grown children, about the arrangement. They find out, however, when H. HEDGE, assigned to the job, takes over complete control of the household; occupies the elder Brooke's private quarters and turns the library into an office. His plans develop a snag when, after installing a time-clock, Mary, the cook, refuses to punch it. Hedge has just explained to her that he must "insist upon an observance of rules."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"RULES" repeated Mary.

"Rules an' regulations! 'Tis rule this an' rule that."

"Walk this way, Mary; it saves ships."

"Write this in a book, Mary; I must know the price of coffee an' say."

"Tis 'Fill out the card, Mary; 'tis needful for me to keep track av yer conduct! An' I'm writin' in books an' fillin' out cards whin 'tis me that should be cookin'."

"An' ye've got Elvira that crazy with lithery wurk that the dishes shant without washin'."

"Thin things have I done for ye, Mither Hedge—thin things, but no more! I'll walk in me own way as long as me ould legs carry me. An' Elvira, do ye be walkin' as the Lord intinded, dacent and content. An' we'll punch no dommed clock."

"The clock will be punched," said Hedge. "Please remember."

An efficiency man, installed with full authority to reorganize human activities, always wins. That is one of the fundamental laws of efficiency. So it happened that H. Hedge won in the matter of the time-clock.

He was not, however, aware of his victory until eight o'clock. At that hour he was seated in the dining-room and the three Brookes were also at the table.

"You may serve, Horace," said Constance.

"Breakfast is not ready, Miss Brooke."

"Not ready?"

"Not cooked yet, miss."

The voice of Horace was unemotional, but there was a meaning in the glance he bestowed upon Hedge.

The efficiency man, without a word, rose from his place and went downstairs to the kitchen. It was empty. He ascended the back stairs and entered the servants' living-room. Just inside the door he paused and listened to the sobbed voice of Mary.

"Thry it agin, Elvira. 'Tis shame an' eorror an' the work av the devil, but thry! 'Tis an hour gone now an' no kittle on the shovels. Haven't ye the thrick av it yet? Don't be answerin' me, but thry. I've tried until me fingers are achin' an' there's no shine in me head."

"Thry it agin, ye fool! Are ye that clumsy? Here; give over the key, an' I'll thry it meself. May the devil fly away with a clock like that!"

But the devil did not fly away with it, despite the earnest prayer of Mary Monahan. Instead, he backed out of the room and made his way back to the dining-hall, where the three Brookes were in whispered consultation with Horace.

"Where is our breakfast?" demanded Billy, rising at the entrance of the efficiency man.

"Apparently it is on the knees of the gods," answered H. Hedge placidly.

"Are they eating it?"

Hedge ignored him and turned to the butler.

"Horace, do you understand anything about a time-clock?"

"I—er—I've seen them, sir."

"Don't say 'er'—it's meaningless."

"Very good, sir."

"Can you punch a time-clock?"

"I think so, sir."

"There is one in the servant's hall. Go out and punch it. In behalf of Mary and Elvira—for this time only. Hereafter they will punch it themselves."

"Yes, sir."

The efficiency man took his seat at the table and smiled blandly at the three Brookes.

They did not smile at him.

"What's all this stuff about a time-clock?" demanded Billy.

"It concerns the servants."

"It concerns us, if we can't get anything to eat."

"Be patient."

"Patient! Say, Mr. Efficiency Engineer, I'm as patient as anybody—"

The three Brookes exchanged glances and became expectant.

When Mary entered the dining-room her round face was moist with perspiration and her arms were folded resolutely across her ample bosom.

"Is the clock punched yet?" asked the efficiency man.

"Tis not."

"Do you know how?"

"I do not."

"I sent Horace to punch it for you, for this morning only. He says you refused to allow him to do so."

"I did."

"Why?"

Mary took a step forward and came to a second halt. Her cold, blue eyes met the glance of the efficiency man without a quiver.

"Me little man," she said, "'tis ye that towld me I'd be punchin' the clock meself. An' ag'inst the hour I punch that clock, there'll be no breakfast. The rules an' regulations are none of my makin'."

"Ye yourself intinded thin. An' I'll have no Englishman butler tellin' me how I'll be puttin' a key in a time-clock. No, nor no Eytalian furnace-man, either."

H. Hedge viewed her without emotion, but the three Brookes were displaying lively interest.

"I did not ask Giovanni to help you," remarked the efficiency man.

"An' 'tis mercy for him. I've done me own wurk in this house for 13 years. Mither Hedge, an' no odds from annybody since I had the lumbago, three winters gone. 'Tis not me put the clock in the house. But if it has to be punchin', I'll do me own punchin'. Mind ye that. I'm an independent woman, sor. Divil a punch goes into that clock for Mary but I do it meself."

"But I heard you trying to get Elvira to do it."

"Ay, the poor fool. 'Twas useless. I'll ask her no more. From now till the day av judgment, Mither Hedge, I'm—I'm—the saints, I'm scientific!"

Mary placed her hands on her hips and awaited a reply.

"We're hungry, Mary," said Alice plaintively.

"Ye poor darlin', av course y' are! But 'tis not me can do annything for ye. The days av me cookin' is over, dear; I'm a clock-puncher. An' whin I'm not punchin' clocks, I'm writin' in books. An' whin I'm not writin' in books, I'm shleepin' forward an' back, like a dancin' master."

"This science. We're under regulations now, dear. Do ye mind the eggs I cooked yistherday? They went on the scales first. There's no more pochin' two eggs for Miss Alice. I'm pochin' four ounces. That's science, darlin' dear."

"An' there's no more coffee made in the ould pot. No, indade! 'Tis dribbled out of a new-fangled Rooshian machine, so many minutes to so many ounces, with Elvira holdin' the watch. An' that's science. An' between whins, whin we know how, we're to run an' punch the clock. Science!"

NEXT CHAPTER: Efficiency in gasoline and hats.

The three Brookes exchanged glances and became expectant.

When Mary entered the dining-room her round face was moist with perspiration and her arms were folded resolutely across her ample bosom.

"Is the clock punched yet?" asked the efficiency man.

"Do you know how?"

Mary took a step forward and came to a second halt. Her cold, blue eyes met the glance of the efficiency man without a quiver.

"Me little man," she said, "'tis ye that towld me I'd be punchin' the clock meself. An' ag'inst the hour I punch that clock, there'll be no breakfast. The rules an' regulations are none of my makin'."

"Ye yourself intinded thin. An' I'll have no Englishman butler tellin' me how I'll be puttin' a key in a time-clock. No, nor no Eytalian furnace-man, either."

H. Hedge viewed her without emotion, but the three Brookes were displaying lively interest.

"I did not ask Giovanni to help you," remarked the efficiency man.

"An' 'tis mercy for him. I've done me own wurk in this house for 13 years. Mither Hedge, an' no odds from annybody since I had the lumbago, three winters gone. 'Tis not me put the clock in the house. But if it has to be punchin', I'll do me own punchin'. Mind ye that. I'm an independent woman, sor. Divil a punch goes into that clock for Mary but I do it meself."

"But I heard you trying to get Elvira to do it."

"Ay, the poor fool. 'Twas useless. I'll ask her no more. From now till the day av judgment, Mither Hedge, I'm—I'm—the saints, I'm scientific!"

Mary placed her hands on her hips and awaited a reply.

"We're hungry, Mary," said Alice plaintively.

"Ye poor darlin', av course y' are! But 'tis not me can do annything for ye. The days av me cookin' is over, dear; I'm a clock-puncher. An' whin I'm not punchin' clocks, I'm writin' in books. An' whin I'm not writin' in books, I'm shleepin' forward an' back, like a dancin' master."

"This science. We're under regulations now, dear. Do ye mind the eggs I cooked yistherday? They went on the scales first. There's no more pochin' two eggs for Miss Alice. I'm pochin' four ounces. That's science, darlin' dear."

"An' there's no more coffee made in the ould pot. No, indade! 'Tis dribbled out of a new-fangled Rooshian machine, so many minutes to so many ounces, with Elvira holdin' the watch. An' that's science. An' between whins, whin we know how, we're to run an' punch the clock. Science!"

When Mary entered the dining-room her round face was moist with perspiration and her arms were folded resolutely across her ample bosom.

"I did."

"Why?"

NEWS

LADY BOWLERS

Monday night marked the turning point for the ladies of Dixon as carried on by the local Y. M. C. A. The number that participated in the different activities far exceeded the hopes of those in charge. The bowling alleys were used continuously and the ladies seemed to enjoy the game regardless of the low scores that were made. It is not the high score that counts so much as it is trying to beat the high score. The swimming pool was enjoyed by at least thirty girls and ladies during the afternoon and night. The class conducted by Miss White was attended by twelve women who wished to learn how to swim or to improve their present method. The pool never looked better and cleaner than it did Monday after having its regular cleaning. This gives the ladies the advantage of knowing that the pool is clean and fresh for their regular classes. Every day women are asking about the work that is being carried on at the Y and are being encouraged to enter into some of the activities. Several of the young ladies who bowled yesterday are going to attend the regular class on the gym floor from now on.

New Bowling Leagues.

Three new bowling leagues are to start on the Y. M. C. A. alleys within the next week. The church league will be composed of four teams. The Christians, Lutherans, Methodists, and the Presbyterians. Reynolds Wire, Brown Shoe, I. N. U. and the Inde-Penn Oil Co. will make up the Industrial League. Among the boys of the Y there is to be started a league called the Pickle League. Each one of the four teams is named after some kind of pickle and is captained by one of the best boy bowlers at the Y. The captains are Earl Schertner, Ed Worley, John Shaulis and Wakley Flannigan. Teams will be picked from the Y membership some time today. The following are the schedules for the three leagues:

Church League.

The schedule for the first round of the Church League is:

ABE MARTIN

A home sits along somehow when father's loffin'. It's only when mother lays off that it goes t' th' dogs. We don't hear a word about California buyin' $500,000,000 worth o' earthquake insurance, but jest let a Floridian buy a pair o' gum boots an' th' whole world knows it.

About th' only difference between a private servant an' a public servant is that a private servant has t' be qualified for something else besides holdin' a polbook. You don't have t' milk in th' snow if you run an alligator farm.

Wednesday, Nov. 11, 7:00—Brown Shoe Company vs Ill. Northern Utilities Co.

GIRLS Hi-Y CLUB

Girls' Hi-Y Club met Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. for their regular supper and meeting. After Miss Louise Brewster, the President of the club, called the meeting to order, short talks were made by the Advisory Committee, Miss Velma Fay White and Mrs. Lazier.

The induction ceremony team then took its place and 21 new members were taken into the club. This makes a total membership now of the older girls' Hi-Y Club of nearly fifty and the keen interest that is shown spells nothing but success for this young club. This club, with the brother organization, the Boys' Hi-Y Club, can do much and from all reports, are accomplishing a great deal along the line of their motto, which is to "Create, Maintain and Extend Throughout the High School and Community, High Standards of Christian Character."

Boys Hi-Y Club.

The Boys' Hi-Y Club will meet on Thursday noon for their regular luncheon when the new members, who were recently voted in will be introduced to the Club and an address will be given by R. D. Harper on his recent hunting trip in the Canadian woods.

The Hi-Y Club has lined up the following program from the present time to the end of the year:

Nov. 12th "Hunting in Canadian Woods," R. D. Harper.
Nov. 15th Initiation Evening.
Meeting 6:30, Dr. K. B. Segner, speaker.

AMUSEMENTS

GRAND OPERA

Brilliant debuts are the order of the hour at the Chicago Civic Opera Company, following the sensational success of the premiere with which the 1925-26 season of lyric drama got under way in Chicago.

This week has been distinguished in that respect. After the performance of Cavalleria Rusticana, Wednesday, Eleanor Sawyer, who made her American debut, in the role of Santuzza, was accorded one of the greatest ovations ever witnessed in the old Auditorium.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the many characterizing the second week of the season is the inclusion in the schedule of the first repeat performance of "Der Rosenkavalier," on Friday night (Nov. 13). This tuneful German opera in the comedy vein has proved the most successful novelty that the company has introduced in years. The first repetition of "La Traviata" Saturday afternoon and the season's first performance of "Tosca" Saturday night are also noteworthy features. The latter, sung at popular prices, with no seat in the Auditorium costing more than an ordinary theater seat, with a cast including such artists as Eleanor Sawyer, Fernand Anseau, Cesare Formichi, Vittorio Treviani, and Lodovico Oliviero is regarded by many as an eloquent symbol of the company's policy of placing tremendous bargains before the music loving masses.

Sunday (Nov. 15) brings a decided novelty in the bill for the "Suburban special" as the matinee performance is known because of the big out-of-town patronage drawn every Sunday afternoon. "Samson and Delilah" will be sung, a spectacular opening for the third week. A star cast, including Louise Homer, Charles Marshall, Edward Coteuill, Cesare Formichi, Jose Mojica, Lodovico Oliviero, Antonio Nicholich and Desira Defrere will interpret the colorful Biblical opera.

Monday (Nov. 16) brings a repetition of "Marian Lescout," with Muzio, Cortis, Rimini and Coteuill in the cast. Moranzoni will conduct Tuesday. Gounod's masterpiece, "Faust" will be given with Miss Sawyer in the role of Marguerite. Others in the cast include Hackett, Bonelli and Lazzari, Grovlez conducting.

Wednesday, "The Masked Ball" will be repeated with Ralva, Marshall, Lenska and Steel; Polacco conducting. "Die Walkure" will be given its premier performance of the season on Thursday evening with Forral, Van Gordon, Lenska, Lanost, Kipnis and Coteuill in the cast; Pocock conducting. Friday night no performance is scheduled. Saturday afternoon (Nov. 21), "Martha" will be sung with Mason, Pavloska, Schipa, Lazzari, and Treviani; Moranzoni conducting. Saturday night "Il Trovatore" will be sung at popular prices with Muzio, Lenska, Cortis and Bonelli; Weber conducting.

Ladies giving parties should use engraved or printed invitations. We will be pleased to show you samples and quote you prices. B. F. Shaw Printing Co., printers for 75 years.
